

ROBIN LINE

COLD CALL SCRIPT · GOAL: BOOK THE CALL, NOT CLOSE THE SALE

The rule: you've got ~20 seconds before the thumb hits red. Stay warm, talk less, get them talking, then ask for a short call. Don't pitch the product — sell the fifteen minutes. [brackets] = fill in live.

1 · OPEN

"Hey [Name], how's it going man?"

→ Let them answer.

2 · THE INTERRUPT

"Hey, awesome — great to meet you too. So I'll be completely straight with you: you have no idea who I am, so let me explain. I run a cleaning company here in LA called Spotless Scrubbers. This is gonna sound completely random — but just give me twenty seconds, and if you don't like what I'm saying, I'm gone. Cool?"

3 · VALUE + DISCOVERY

"Awesome, thank you. So me and my team built a system for our own company, and now we never book a single job by hand — no VA, no back-and-forth, no chasing cleaners around. It cut about thirty hours a week out of my life and put an extra two grand a month on our top line. If you don't mind me asking — how are you going about booking jobs right now?"

Back the $2K if they ask "how?" — missed-lead follow-up (responding to leads the VA couldn't get to) plus the reactivation campaign emailing past clients. A number you can defend lands; a number you can't sounds made up.

—— THE FORK: how they react to the booking question ——

4A · IF THEY BRUSH YOU OFF ("NOT INTERESTED" / "WE'RE GOOD")

"No worries. Honestly, that's exactly how most of the owners we work with reacted at first — right up until I showed them the system books every appointment for them, no human touching it. Would it be cool if we hop on a quick fifteen minute call so I can show you what that actually looks like? You free [Wednesday at 3], or does [Thursday] work better?"

→ Re-ask ONCE here. If it's still no, go to beat 6 — don't grind a third time.

ROBIN LINE

COLD CALL SCRIPT · GOAL: BOOK THE CALL, NOT CLOSE THE SALE

4B · IF THEY ENGAGE (THEY TELL YOU THEIR SETUP)

“That’s actually really solid — and it’s kinda funny, you’re already ahead of most guys I talk to. What you’re doing right now — [their current setup: VA, manual texting, etc.] — is exactly what I was doing before we built this. So honestly, you’re a perfect fit. Look, I know you’re a busy business owner, I’m not gonna waste your time explaining the whole thing over the phone. I’d love to hop on a quick fifteen minute call. Worst case, you walk away knowing exactly what cleaning companies are putting into their business right now — either way you come out smarter. I’d love to show you how it works. You free [tomorrow at 3], or does [Wednesday] work better?”

5 · ✓ IF THEY SAY YES — LOCK IT IN

“Perfect — [Wednesday at 3] it is. I’ll shoot you a text and a calendar invite right now so it’s locked in. Talk soon, [Name] — see you then.”

→ Send the invite WHILE you're still on the phone. An unconfirmed call is a no-show waiting to happen.

6 · ✗ IF IT'S STILL NO

“No worries at all. Just do me one favor — next time you’re booking a job by hand, just remember you don’t have to. Whenever that gets old, I’m one text away. Best of luck out there, man.”

→ Then actually text them. The seed pays off later — don’t skip the follow-up.